Oasis Remote Control System; Oasis Remote Control System 2.City School District A city school district (also city school board) is a school district of a city with a municipal school district or other independent school district with the same name. The school district is usually located in the city, unlike a state school district, where it is often spread out over several counties. Government The school board (also known as the school board of education) is responsible for the general supervision and administration of city schools. The governing body is made up of the Superintendent of Schools and members elected by the school district's voters. The superintendent may be the mayor of the city. The superintendent supervises the administration of the district, receives the reports of school committees and recommendations of the district's board of education, and serves as a liaison to the city council or city government. The president or other executive officer of the district is empowered by the board to administer the district in the superintendent's absence or when the superintendent is unable to perform his or her duties. Local control The school board is the school district's governing body. The board of education is charged with the direction and control of the city schools. In some cities, the board of education is also responsible for the non-school activities of the city. The board of education is usually made up of the president or other executive officer of the district, the superintendent, and a minimum of six board members, generally selected by their constituents for four-year terms. The board of education is responsible for the general supervision and administration of city schools, which are free and open to all citizens. Superintendent The superintendent of the district is the school district's chief administrative officer. The superintendent is appointed by the board of education, and may be the mayor of the city. As the superintendent, the superintendent conducts all business of the district, appoints all school department heads and personnel, controls the district budget, and generally oversees the operation of city schools. The superintendent may also act as a liaison to the city council or city government. If the superintendent is appointed by the city council or other government body, the appointment is not subject to approval by the school board. The superintendent is empowered to supervise the administration of the district, receive the reports of the school committees and recommendations of the district's board of education, and serve as a liaison to the city council or 82157476af
